A whole world on the kitchen table

The somewhere-new explorer pack

Draw a map, invent one unusual rule and send a postcard from a place your family has just imagined.

A little guide for grown-ups

For map makers and children who ask ‘what if?’

1. Draw three places and a path between them.
2. Invent one rule and a little problem it might cause.
3. Send a postcard, then plan a quest in your new world.

Inside the pack

A map of somewhere new / The little rules of our world / Postcards from somewhere new / Our little quest

Paper and pencils are enough. Draw, tell or dictate. Use only the pages that fit your day.

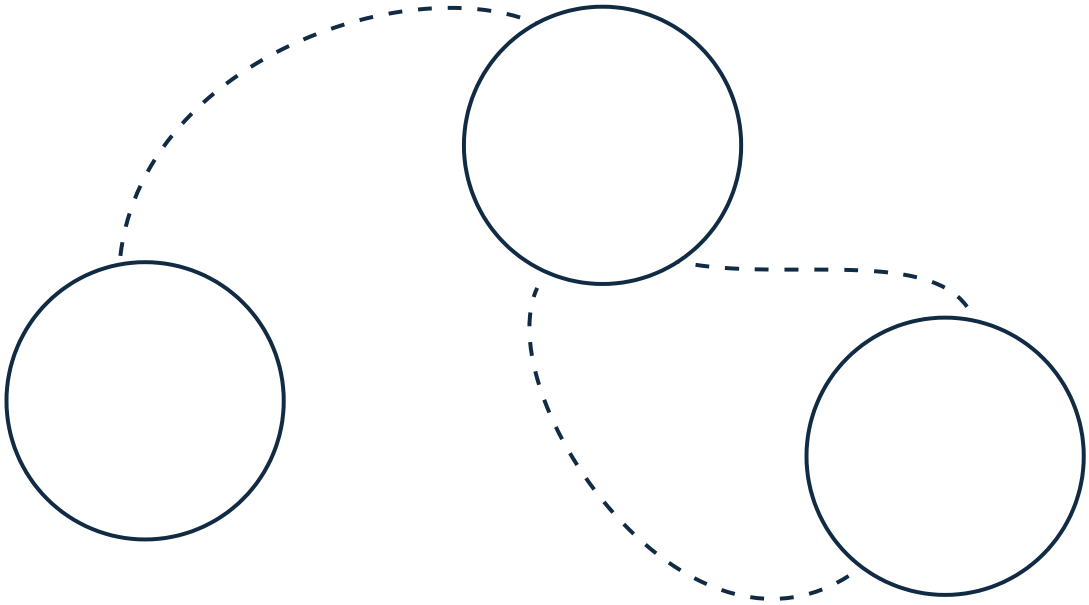

A little idea for right now

What would a village built inside a teacup do when it starts to rain?

A map of somewhere new

Three places, one path and one unusual rule. Draw or name the circles. Leave room for the next adventure.

Our world is called...

The unusual rule here is...

The first place we visit...

Something we hear or feel here...

The little rules of our world

A place becomes a story when something works differently.

Invent a world with one surprising rule. Draw a place where we can see that rule in action, then talk through what it changes.

This is what our rule looks like

In our world, this is ordinary

Perhaps houses walk, or trees remember names.

But this one thing is tricky

What problem could the rule create?

Our character discovers

A secret, a shortcut or a new use for the rule.

A small adventure could begin when

Let something change for just one day.

World name: _____ Our world's makers: _____

Postcards from somewhere new

Send a little piece of an imaginary world.

Draw the view on the first postcard. On the second, write or dictate a message from your character. Keep it whole or cut along the boxes with a grown-up.

A view from our world

Dear

Today I saw… / The strangest thing here is… / Wish you were here because…

From

Next time, write a reply from the friend who receives this postcard.

Our little quest

A clear wish, a tricky obstacle, and a clever way through. Good for a lively little adventure.

Our character...

Our world...

1. Meet our friend

Who is here, and where do they live?

2. Make a wish

What do they really want today?

3. Add a wobble

What gets in the way?

4. Try something

What do they try first? Why doesn't it quite work?

5. Find another way

Who helps, or what new idea changes things?

6. Bring it home

How does it end? What is a little different now?
